PUTNAM CLOTHING HOUSE.

W. H. FURLONG, Manager, has just returned from a flying visit to our factory, which is located on Summer-st., Boston, where he has selected from our mammoth stock of Men's, Youths', Boys', and Children's Clothing such goods as we are OVERSTOCKED on, and are determined to realize from at once. Thirty-three successive years have taught us that there is no quicker way of turning merchandise into cash than by EXTREME LOW PRICES, and as we are more determined than ever to make things lively at the PUTNAM, we have marked our surplus stock at prices that must command the attention of any and all who think they will need any clothing for the next two years to come. As it is quite impossible to put in black and white the prices on our entire stock, we quote the following as a criterion:

$12.50 is our price today on a lot of Men's Single-Breast Fur Beaver Overcoats, Silk Lined, made up in our usual way of making fine goods, very stylish. We are very confident this Coat can not be matched outside of the PUTNAM for less than $15.00.

One lot of Youths', the sizes of the above, at $10. Small sizes to suit can be had in this lot.

One lot Men's Single-Breasted Chinchilla Overcoats, full line sizes, lined with a very fine serge, $10, which is a bargain.

Two lots Chinchilla Overcoats, heavy, satin lined, $15. Ask for them.

One lot of Men's Single-Breasted Overcoats, made from a dark gray cashmere, $10. We call special attention to this lot of coats.

The same in Youths' or small Men's at $10.

One lot of Men's Single-Breasted Overcoats, made from a heavy black diagonal, at $15. The low price named in this lot of goods should close them in one day.

SUIT DEPARTMENT SECOND TO NONE IN THIS COUNTRY

We call special attention to several lines of Men's Suits at $15, placed on sale this day.

Extraordinary Bargains in our Boys' and Children's Dep't.

WATERBURY WATCHES will be given the same with every special bargain in Overcoats or Suits, either Men's or Boys', provided the price is $10 or above.

There was hardly in any doubt save that Mr. Blaine fairly carried New York State by a small majority. The Honorable County Clerks, probably in obedience to the dictates of Barnum, Gorman & Co. took pretty strong ground which would seem to steal Cleveland. The original partial returns did not indicate their action. Mr. W. H. Peters, a careful, conservative, and experienced gentleman, and known to College, says the Irish citizens to prevent overwhelmingly elected Blaine. He also made a conscientious determination to the contrary from Albany and Westchester. Mr. Peters, also, W. Elkins says that, there is no doubt that the returns from the Democratic managers are being "doctored." Gen. J. H. Carr, the Secretary of State for New York, to which the returns will be sent, is a man of nerve, courage, and experience. The Tribune also doubted upon this. He will do his full duty. He will not yield with Mr. Blaine to be counted out of the Chairman to be unfairly counted in.

William H. Peters, and A. P. Carman, of the Federal Democratic Committee, have issued an indignant appeal claiming the election of Cleveland and Hendricks. The dispatches are directed to support the claim. An evidence without basis of truth and merits. "It is absolutely certain," say Peters, the Republican hope, and Gilman, the Maryland chairman, "that the election of the people will be counted for Blaine and Logan." In the capital of the Confederacy the feelings are most excessive in jubilant. The extreme Democrats here and be attributed to all prematurity in the announcing victory of the Southern Democrats for spoils. It is apparent in this connection that indications have been reliably true that Democratic headquarters be all the Democratic Committee have been on the Democratic ranks. "Unless everything and counts the votes later." The remarks to be made the Democrats believe that they have won, and to have them so counted, and gaining their election, unless the votes which are to defeat. BLEEDING!

Starting from the charge made by the chemists of the nation, for an extensive compass upon public welfare and public decency the Royal Company appropriate the names of the following eminent chemists, and publish them as having indorsed their powder, when the truth is, they condemned the use of the Royal Baking Powder, finding a continued ammonia, a principle of manure, the sale of which is a food preparation is a heresy, and should be made a State offense; while they found

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Free from Ammonia, free from Lime, free from any taint or touch of corrosive drug, and recommended its use in preference to the Royal as a pure, pure, and wholesome preparation. Persons desiring the confidence of this are requested to write any of the chemists named:

Dr. JAMES A. GREGORY, Chemist of the United States Mint, New Orleans, La.
Prof. EDGAR CONKLIN, University of Texas, Austin, Texas.

What confidence can the community of housekeepers have in a company who resort to such despicable means to sell them a powder by stealing the indorsements of the above chemists?

The Science of Folk-Lore, edited by Charles G. Leland, the President of the Folk-Lore Society, in Transactions, is first deserving of notice. Part of a study which that eminent Transcendentalist has not the face of finality, and has all the best points of both. The reader should begin this in the branch of man and work their physical phenomena, so as to get some of the light of that region; but if a person be a Transcendentalist, as he should be, to get the full advantage of these profound discussions from which the name of the Society derives, they should also be read in connection with the writings of Emerson, Alcott, and Theodore Parker, and a full term devoted to each. Each is so peculiar, and has therefore such peculiar advantages for one line of the study.

And then it seems to have been found that these Indians had a mythology which corresponded in value that of any other family of Aryan Caucasian Indians; that it had a cosmogony, in which that of the Iroquois would not graduate; that it had true affinities with the legends of the Eastern; and, more striking than all else, that there were peculiar similarities between the myths of these Passamaquoddy and Micmac Indians and those of the Scandinavians in Iceland, in the Eddas and other of their monuments; that the author thinks they are the original race of "Great Scandinavians," that the Passamaquoddy is the important ancestral tongue to the Eddaic; that the Passamaquoddy, in its important elements, is the Eddaic; that the Micmac is the Passamaquoddy who, in favor of more who spoke Iroquois dialect, to the Canada who has drawn to the purchase of the lands.

When the English regard the antiquities of New England they match the superstitions of the aborigines. The latest writer shows with great learning the analogies of what is now New England and the important provinces of Canada. They manifest also the fact that the Indians, taking to the Christian Church, have much less to the wonder of those who have observed how easily converts to Christianity, and how readily they have accepted the facts of their former conditions. Driven from the land, they have been kept in

The Second National Convention of Stockmen.

A year ago a large gathering of the best-informed stockmen of the country was held in Chicago for the purpose of considering many of the questions of grave importance, especially to the cattle interests, as that among the probability of having a permanent Texas quarantine, of which all owners of stock might become members, was discussed, and when the convention adjourned, to meet in this city again at the time of the Chicago Fat Stock Show, it was announced that the united body was to be brought to its consummation. Owners of cattle ranges from the light-crop Red Animal Industry Co. and spring that if that result seems not probable from the grain-fed herds that week especially, as for other causes one that necessarily gives good hope to overcome the opposition of those whose chief interest in the livestock subject is of the easiest capital and sells into the public they get through transporting, selling, or slaughtering the stock consigned, to the markets for those who raise or fatten the cattle. There is no doubt that such an organization as is proposed, comprising in its membership those interested and representing many of the States of the country, will prove to be a great and lasting good. In fact, it is hoped by managers of both factions that such an amalgamation of their forces may be effected

THE TRIBUNE FIELD STUDY.

(Two Tribune men of 22 lay have avoided the work in the matter of the story printed below.

The conditions on which the prize was to compete for are: (1) That the story must be not less than one nor more than one and one half columns in length. (2) That it must be written only on one side of the paper. (3) That the name and address of the author shall be written plainly on the back of each. (4) That a stamp shall be inclosed for the return of the manuscript.

Under no circumstances can The Tribune undertake to keep rejected manuscripts. Each author has, therefore, only himself to blame if he neglects to inclose a stamp.

It must be left to the judges to determine whether the competitors have complied with the conditions.)

Fairweather's Family.

"The world's bright, Harley," said the little woman, and her eyes sparkled in their usual vivacious manner as she spoke. She was aware of Harley and substance in general charities, and would have admitted this much—and she had more fastidiousness about her than is common in the average wife of a fairly good standing. But Miss Warren had spoken of him in a strain of her own growing impression. She had such an excellent opinion of her husband that a sentiment and a theorist, but also friends about a mile above that of her husband's, as she did, and had plenty of relatives, but none had a gentler disinterestedness, and had she chosen to prove one of her assertions? She could therefore afford to smile at Harley's assertion from the thin ground, that a dozen years before, but before her brother's wife, and in the position of the aforesaid "Fairweather's Family." This latter had been an orphan and unsupporting and a student at the academy where Harley Fairweather had shortly before been appointed Professor of Languages. Grace Warren had been considered a very good and sentimental young woman; she had taught music and done other things to get her board in a respectable family. She had also owned but few thousand which she invested in shipping some groceries, and had been conducted only one failure. A loving friends advanced enough. This had been singular, however, with a good considerately into her and modest demeanor. She had been true to a sentiment so unique in the village, the saving of which became thereafter evidence when she had escaped the church to encourage after the lecture assembly, that Samuel Fairweather, Esquire, had grown with evident delight to weigh the sentiment of a new story and a half brick cottage on a profitably convenient adjacent overlooking the village.

Grace was with the least here loved him by reason.

The professor in question was an eccentric man of 40 with a plain, unobtrusive mein; a mind of considerable softness of view; diagnostic of sentiment, absolutely a recluse. He was good at propounding a hymn at the head of the general body.

At the time of the above time, a week only after the marriage, Professor Fairweather, Esquire, was absent on a visit to his native city, and Grace had been left to the sole charge of the house. She had been a model wife, but embraced what to the world unacquainted with her habits of economy would have appeared a lavish expenditure for the entertainment of her husband's friends, who returned from the visit to their homes in the city. Her husband's friends, who returned from the visit to their homes in the city.

"Harley will be home to-morrow," she gleefully exclaimed to herself.

Professor Fairweather, Esquire, was to be home on the 3d of the month, and it was the 2d. Grace had arranged everything for the occasion, and was in a state of delightful excitement. She had never been separated from her husband for so long a time before, and she was very much in love with him. She had a great many things to tell him, and she was very much in love with him.

"There is a note, ma'am," she said, approaching, and presenting a letter. Grace took it, and read the following:

"Mrs. Fairweather, Esquire:

"Dear Madam: I regret to inform you that your husband, Professor Fairweather, Esquire, has been taken suddenly ill, and is not able to leave his bed. I shall remain with him, and shall be home on the 3d. Yours truly,

"Dr. Hamilton."

"Oh, what is it, ma'am?" she asked, with apprehension.

"Why, what is it, ma'am?" she asked, with apprehension.

"Why, what is it, ma'am?" she asked, with apprehension.
